the title got me. The excerpts are intriguing. After a few chapters I quickly realized it wasn't the book I thought. However, for humor's sake I finished it. It seemed like the author had a great idea and a fun perspective but probably should have taken in subject matter from a wider group rather than just her dating history.... and perhaps some additional verbiage. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. You Got That Right, Sister By Travelin' Barb This book should be required reading for any woman contemplating a male/female relationship. The author pulls the curtain on the seductive smile and rippling abs to expose the personalities and types of men that lay in wait. Once this personality has been molded (about age 12), don't think it will change, ladies. With this book, you'll be equipped to watch for the danger signals (and hopeful indicators). 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A Woman Without a Man is Like a Fish Without a Bicycle By Denise, a fan This book is a funny, all too realistic recap of men and relationships that we all know of, and yet ends with a heartwarming chapter dedicated to when you get it right. It is well written, with enough humor to keep you laughing throughout, and enough reality to keep you turning the pages.

A humorous reflection about men, based on 25 years of dating and marriage.

About the Author Margie Melvin has had a lot of experience with just about every type of man you can imagine...some good and some really bad. Margie has been married four times (finally got it right) and in exploring the world of relationships has come across some very interesting men. This collection of reflective essays has been created from her personal experiences.
