Tony Piro : Bacon's Not a Food, It's a Lifestyle!: A Calamities of Nature Collection before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Bacon's Not a Food, It's a Lifestyle!: A Calamities of Nature Collection:

Calamities of Nature is a gag-a-day comic strip that focuses on topics of social commentary, science, religion, philosophy, and lots of bacon. This is the second volume of Calamities of Nature comics. This collection features: - Most of the comics posted in the online archives during its second year - An introduction written by Zach Weiner of Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal - Twelve bonus comics that are not available in the online archives along with creator commentary Calamities of Nature has been online since 2007. During this time, it has been viewed by millions of people and won a number of accolades, including being a finalist for the best webcomic of 2010 by the Washington Post, finalist in the 2008 Webcomic Idol contest finalist (a comic version of the American Idol show), and a finalist in the 2008 Weblog Awards (the worlds largest blog competition, with over a million votes cast) alongside such famous comics as Dilbert and xkcd. Calamities of Nature has also been featured on a number of prominent blogs, including Pharyngula and Bad Astronomy (which was named one of Time Magazines top 25 blogs of 2009).
