"Goats" is a non-syndicated web comic strip done by Jonathan Rosenberg. This strip came to my attention when Jonathan first started it and asked me to throw him a link (my site being all about comic strips). "Goats" is a surreal strip about two male best friends Jon and Philip, their talking pet goat Toothgnip, and their evil talking pet chicken Diablo. There are also aliens, beer, women, beer, dwarves, beer, zombies, beer, and more beer. This book is the first "Goats" book despite the fact that it is called "Volume 4".

However, Jonathan has promised to follow George Lucas's footsteps and release the prequels soon ("Volume 3" will be out soon). This book covers strips from January 2000 to December 2000. The significant event of this book is that Jon (who is a loser when it comes to women) finally gets a girlfriend named Megan. She's a hottie and totally with it that makes you wonder if it isn't pity love. Ah, but if it weren't for pity, many of us would be in a world of hurt! Bottom line, this is a pretty funny comic strip but it is NOT for the kids (in my opinion). The humor and content can often shift into the "R" range so you've been warned. Otherwise, get this book and help a web cartoonist! 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Evil Knowledge MonkeysBy ken robertsSince the first Cro-Magnon painted images on the wall of a cave, man has strived to compose the apotheosis of preeminent literature. Until 2001, critics engaged in lengthy debates over which composition marked the summit of man's literary prowess. Dostoevsky's Crime and Punishment? Joyce's Ulysses? Shakespeare's "Hamlet"? Well today, that debate is over. In Behold the Power of Ignorance, Jonathan Rosenberg created a work that towers over all which has preceded it. Its erudite deconstruction of man, depicting the underlying indomitable spirit of the human condition, transcends our quaint notions of what was thought possible with mere ink and paper. Alas, my meager prose could never give Behold the Power of Ignorance the mad props that it deserves, for it would require someone of Mr. Rosenberg's genius to convey his own book's sublime splendor. Thus, there remains nothing more for me to say except to implore you to buy the book. 0 of 0 people

Compelling, original and satirical, a must have for any Gen-Xer's Ikea mail-ordered coffee table or the floor of the bohemian studio apartment in the parent's basement. Bringing together issues of single-life, animal rights, alien invasions, sexual dysfunction, and sado-masochism this hilarious book filled with wit and slapstick compiles the Goats comic strip for the year 2000. Not only are the comics a poignant commentary on everyday-life, through trips into the surreal they speak volumes on social issues of the day. Through the innocence of some characters and the wickedness of others, the entire gamut of human emotion is displayed among the denizens of a specific New York pub. This book makes a fantastic gift for those who've never heard of Goats and enjoy quality, edgy humor.

Behold The Power Of Ignorance -- Goats: Volume IV is a collection of comic strips from the popular online comic strip Goats. The book features all the strips from the year 2000, including fan faves such as Neil and Bob's Big Adventure, The World's Strongest Man (and the Twix Saga, pt. 2), Reunion, and much more.
