She loves it and can practice her reading while learning a little bit about art at the same time. My five year old thinks it's hysterical and the absurdity of the little people and foods is amusing to her.It's a good way to challenge traditional thinking about our relationships with the objects around us and tweaks at the imagination in all of us.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Amazing miniature scenes!By beekyI really love the photos. I don't like the author's interpretations, even though that was what he was thinking of when he made the art. I prefer to use my own interpretation of the scene. So I look at the photos and ignore the text. When I first read about his work in a magazine somewhere, it didn't print his explanations of the scenes, so I was surprised to find them in the book. I appreciate all of the tiny lifelike figures and accessories and can't imagine how he made them! Amazing!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Fun book to have around for people to look thru.By JoePFun book to have around for people to look thru. Amazing photographic work and very interesting to look at. I saw the photographer interviewed on TV.

Welcome to a world where little people have big personalities. A world that's upside down and yet weirdly, wonderfully real. A world where Lilliputian thieves poach strawberry seeds. Where it takes a guy with a jackhammer to pop open pistachios. Where skaters fall into a crack in the crme brle, and teddy bear cookies congregate with evil intent.Marrying inspired photographs of real food and tiny people with equally inspired captions, photographer Christopher Boffoli creates a smart, funny, quirky vision of what it means to play with your food. The scenes are hilarious and outlandish a farmer shovels a pasture full of cow pies, aka chocolate chips; hikers pause at a rest stop to take in a magical mushroom forest. And the captions surprise with their cleverness and emotional truth. Of the proudly gesticulating little chef amid the macarons: Right on cue, Philippe stepped up to take all of the credit. Of the tiny bather up to her chin in waves of blue Jell-O: In her continuing search for a husband, Gladys decided it was best to put herself in situations where she needed to be rescued. Of the broad-shouldered technician spreading condiments on a hot dog: Gary always uses too much mustard. But no one can say so. It's a union thing. Happiness, hope, adventure, pride, love, greed, menace, solitude it's our world, seen through a singularly unique and funny lens, in more than 100 scenes from breakfast through dessert.

"Christopher Boffoli won't stop playing with his food, and we couldn't be happier about it."
