Funny, human and I love it9 of 9 people found the following review helpful. Another hilarious romp by Donald DavisBy A CustomerWhat fun! The setting for the title story is--you guessed it--a big screen drive in theater from the '60s, where Donald and his friends worked while in high school. I was laughing out loud as I listened, and my husband had to come check on me. After I got him to listen, he was laughing out loud, too! "Dr. Franklin," the story on the flip side, is a little more serious, but still funny in places. Highly recommended!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Greatest Storyteller!By BeverlyDonald Davis is one of the best storytellers around!! If you haven't you need to check him out!

The home theater will never replace the drive-in theater in America's imaginary landscape. Donald Davis recalls a summer working under the lax supervision of Daff-Knee Garlic, owner and operator of the Sulpher Springs Big-Screen Drive-In Theater in rural North Carolina in the early 1960s. Davis recalls his duties at the concession stand, catching slip-ins, and patrolling the back rows. But the story culminates on Labor Day when the last movie, The Guns of Navarrone, is almost over. Davis

"Davis records the wonders and complexity of modern life as a exemplified in the one-time staple of small-town life, the drive-in theater."
