I'm a medical transcriptionist and used to look forward to every new day for a medical "blooper" to smile at. Well, I have noticed this year that many of the bloopers are being recycled from previous years. Some truly are funny and I enjoy the second (or third) time around, but others? Not so much. They weren't funny the first time around, especially some of the so-called "jokes" that I really don't find amusing at all. I want to see the "real" medical bloopers that people submit as I know I run across a blooper in my line of work nearly every day! I find myself not even bothering to change the date on the calendar and then I happen to glance over at it on my desk and realize I'm a week behind. So I pick it up and tear off each day 'til I get to today's date. I read through all of the ones I just tore off and maybe smile at one and outright laugh at another. The rest? Not even a half-smile. I used to share so many of the bloopers with my colleagues in years past, but the ones that I remember being the funniest I'm reading again this year. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I didn't have any problems like this last year..... For missing a few of the daily calendar pages, it isn't worth the hassle of a return, but it is definitely going to knock a few stars off of my rating. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy Sarah D.Christmas present for my super doctor

The Medical Bloopers calendar administers a daily dose of humor with medical-chart gaffes, transcription blunders, and humorous anecdotes as told by real doctors, nurses, and other medical professionals.For example, when instructed to consume only clear liquids, one patient asked if vodka was acceptable. Another patient, when asked about an old surgical scar, could not recall what surgery he'd had, explaining, "I was asleep when they did it!"
