A great read for all mothers!By KII was immediately drawn to this book because of the title, honestly can any mother say that they have never had a moment (or many moments) of feeling unappreciated and wishing for bedtime to be here, but at the same time dreading the days flying by? "Mommy Needs A Raise (because quitting's not an option)" is such a funny, honest and totally relatable book by Sarah Parshall Perry. I found myself laughing out loud while reading this and remembering when the exact thing or similar thing happened in my own life so many times throughout this book. Sarah gave up her corporate job to stay at home with her children; and while I have not given up my job outside of the home I am completely involved with my children and raising them and while it is challenging and overwhelming it is also the most rewarding thing ever. This is a must-read for all mothers and one that I know I will read over and over as it is refreshing and a great reminder that I am not alone in moments of despair!*Thanks to the Revell Reads Blogger Program for the complimentary copy of this book in exchange for a honest review.*1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Hilarious and on-targetBy T. MurrellRaising kids is nothing like the working world. And no matter how many books you read, kids you babysit, or parents you talk with - nothing can prepare you for the utter chaos that will ensue when you bring one of those lovely creatures home with you. The author, a lawyer, who worked for several years before deciding to stay home with her children, writes with humor and experience as she talks about the blessings and stress of being a mom.I loved this book. I kept reading portions out loud to whomever happened to be near. The author was hilarious and spot on. I could relate to so many of the things that she talked about. It might be a case of misery loves company, but she also, while laughing about the chaos of kids, brought how precious they are to us and how we are entrusted with so much. This was inspiring, thought provoking, and a much needed respite from being a mommy. I would recommend this book to anyone who is or will soon be a mom. Loved it!

Goodbye, Board Room and Legal Briefs--Hello, Dimples, Diapers, and DestructionWomen know that raising children will be different from climbing the corporate ladder. But nothing can truly prepare them for the mind-muddling world of motherhood. It doesn't take long for a new mom to question whether her tyrannical, diapered boss really understands her value to the organization. Because honestly? She's not always sure herself. With her signature wit, lawyer-turned-full-time-mommy Sarah Parshall Perry says what all new moms are thinking when they trade annual reports for homework help and yoga pants. Perry invites moms to laugh alongside her amidst the "Are you kidding me?!" moments that come with the job of raising humans. This book is story of every mother who gives up one thing to get something better--and ends up finding out what she's worth along the way.

From the Back CoverUm, excuse me, but . . . do these children come with dental?Sarah Parshall Perry knew that raising kids would be different from climbing the corporate ladder. But she wasn't ready for just how different. Wasn't a job just a job? And what was that on her shirt? Sarah left the corporate world with a plan to win at mothering and was downright blindsided. Nothing went as planned, everything was foreign, and her bosses didn't always understand her value to the organization. With her signature wit, lawyer-turned-stay-at-home-mommy Sarah says what all of us are thinking when we trade annual reports for homework help and sleepless nights. Sarah invites you to laugh alongside her in the "Are you kidding me?!" moments that come with the job of growing people. Crossing the divide between "employee" and "mother" is hard. But thankfully, it's also hilarious.This book isn't just her story. It's your story. The story of every mother who gives up one thing to get something better--and ends up finding out what she's worth along the way."I have laughed and cried with this award-winning storyteller who is 'thankful to God for the challenges that filled my life after marriage . . . because the untidying of life was the only way I started looking for him.' As a mother who struggled with God's call to leave an enjoyable broadcast career to raise my two preschoolers, I am eager to endorse the latest tragicomedy from one of my most memorable authors and guests."--Moirra Brown, host of 100 Huntley StreetSarah Parshall Perry (JD, University of Virginia School of Law) is a wife and mother of three.
