Should you pick up this delightful collection, be forewarned...Just as I found the number for Rajeneur Medical Spa (to make an appointment for another Restylane injection for my deepening laugh lines from reading each hilarious vignette), the late Erma Bombeck's spirit

broke through, and Brandi channeled a poignant heart string twanging bit from her past, reminding me life is brief, childhood sweet, and memories precious treasures to pull from the chest in the attic of my soul. Gifted writers of humor are a rarity since Erma Bombeck, Teresa Bloomingdale and Shirley Leuth. Please grab a cup of tea, a couple of kleenex, and sit back for a very special read. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Laughter is the Best Medicine! By Susie The holidays are already beginning to stress me out, we are remodeling our kitchen, my dear mother is not feeling well, and my yellow lab just rolled in a mud puddle to disguise herself as a chocolate lab! Just when I think I've had enough, I decided to sit down and read, "More Tales of Suburbia!" When my husband got home from work and heard me laughing hilariously from down the hall, he thought that I had finally had a mental breakdown.. until he saw "THE BOOK!" "This is us," I shouted. Every other story reminds me of us!" "More Tales of Suburbia" is not only entertaining and hilarious, but good medicine for the soul! I suggest you buy a copy before the holidays come any closer! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. a pat on the back or just some fun, this book will have you cheering By Billie Mack I read Tales From Suburbia and thought nothing could make me laugh harder, or give me such a smile. Today I read More Tales From Suburbia and laughed until I cried. The author, Brandi Haas, has such insight on the struggles and frustrations of children, husbands and household chores, then turns them into a laugh riot. For anyone who needs a laugh, a pat on the back or just some fun, this book will have you cheering. This crazy woman can even show you how to get out of a ticket or even have fun while coping with a door to door sales pest! A must read for those of us who need to relate, cope, laugh and know we are OK!

Yes, it gets even crazier... Life in the suburbs isn't easy. Squeezing into those tiny chairs on back-to-school night. Finding your daughter's beloved pet fish floating at the top of his bowl. Planning a romantic evening—only to fall asleep on the couch with your honey. Luckily, we've got Brandi Haas to make us laugh. As the author of the popular blog "Tales from Suburbia," Brandi tackles the big issues of our day. Learn how to hover over a restroom toilet seat and buy fat pants for your husband. See Brandi turn the table on telemarketers. Watch her prove that crazy can be just as effective as cleavage when trying to dodge a traffic ticket. Heartfelt and seriously funny, More Tales from Suburbia: Yes, It Gets Even Crazier is like sharing a bottle of wine and conversation with your best girlfriend.

About the Author Brandi Haas is the author of Tales from Suburbia: You Don't Have to Be Crazy to Live Here, but It Helps. She is originally from California but now resides in Missouri with her husband and daughter. She is sarcastic, neurotic, and very passionate in her belief that Monopoly should be an Olympic sport.
