Christine Sansbury gets you laughing over the things you usually cry about in this delightfully hilarious essay collection on marriage, and parenting. Discover the real cause of mommy brain, how to deal with those embarrassing genetic flaws you passed down to your offspring, and why your parenting choices are always right, all while laughing so hard tears will fall wildly into your wine, I mean water, glass. With short easy essays this book is the perfect gift for busy moms who only get one second of peace a day or for any person simply looking for a good laugh over the human experience.

About the AuthorChristine Sansbury was born in Miami, Florida in the 1970's. This combo has given her a strange love for humidity and immeasurably bad taste. After a brief time in Savannah, GA, she settled in the small artsy town of Dunedin, Florida. For two years she wrote a weekly humor column on marriage and parenting called Pen Name Jane. She continues to write and publish cartoons haphazardly on her blog writtenbychris.com.
