That book was awesome, I am sad robin Williams died like thatBy charlene karrasThat book was awesome, I am sad robin

Williams died like that, but iam so glad he is in heaven now, I would have liked to have more to read, but very good book thank you :-).

Jesuits thought they staged the suicide of Robin Williams to perfection. But Robin shared his heart with Gail from heaven to tell his version of events. The Jesuits threaten death to journalists who dare expose their murder of Robin Williams. Those, like Gail, who have the courage to report the truth, they try to discredit or silence. Gail's story matches the evidence gathered from Church of Gail forensic teams. Church of Gail is where Robin lived.

Read reviews from Brent Spiner, Judge Terry Jenkins, and others for this book at Gabrielle Chana's website: gabriellechana.com/reviews.html From the Author As I wrote this true story, Jesus revealed to me how He fulfilled the longings in Robin's heart when the Jesuits murdered him. This story is for anyone, like Robin's lovely daughter Zelda, who feels shattered about Robin Williams' death. It was not my intent to write a comedy, but I did try to write in first person point of view as Robin Williams, and I'm laughing a lot as I read the Kindle version (paperback version is the same). I must have captured Robin Williams. It appears the story's greatest strength is my believable portrayal of Robin Williams. This book will take the reader right into the soul of that man, which is what I wanted to accomplish. I think Robin in heaven would be pleased that I was able to transform his murder into an inspiring comedy drama. I think you can't write a story about Robin, without making it funny in some ways. This is not a book that will leave you depressed. Robin would have liked that. About the Author Gabrielle Chana has a B.S. degree in Health Education from Florida State University, where she graduated with honors in 1979. She has a second bachelor's degree from a private Baptist university (Baptist University of America) where she studied missions and education. Her maiden name Chord, is the same as Cord from The Carpetbaggers, a movie about her great uncle Howard Hughes. Her father, a retired airline captain, is a pilot like his uncle. Her mother, a beauty pageant winner, worked as a model. She studied writing under award-winning children's author Jim Murphy through The Institute of Children's Literature. After this, she furthered her writing skills through self-study.
