3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. very clever treatment of another so exciting subjectBy David HallSid, you have justified every cent I have ever spent for a housekeeper for me. I am not attracted to housekeeping, but if I ever have to, I now know how.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. OKBy VicAn OK short read. I can't say that cleaning a house is THAT simple, but I suppose it's a start for someone who has never done it before.I do question some of the tools and products the author advocates using (Cuban rag mop ??). But as it's really not expensive, you can't really go wrong.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Sorry I spent the money on this oneBy Cherri W.Not really interesting and nothing special as far as housekeeping. I felt cheated after buying this book despite the low price.

Unless you took a home economics class in school or your parents had you help with the household chores, you may never have learned how to do the various tasks involved in cleaning a house. In both housecleaning and football, you need to know what to do as well as how and when to do it. In other words, you need a game plan. This playbook shares one man's experiences and research in developing a housecleaning strategy and then puts it all together into a handy and useful game plan designed for the single person who may have never learned how to clean a house. Along with sharing author Sidney Showalter's personal story, it provides an area-specific guide to cleaning your entire house. It also offers tips for effectiveness and efficiency along with cleaning trivia, as well as a "special plays" section offering strategic plays for special situations, such as procedures for a full, top-to-bottom deep clean and for when someone stops by unexpectedly. Using a humorous and down-to-earth approach, The Single Man's Housecleaning Playbook provides an excellent guide too tackling the task of keeping your living space clean. Even a seasoned pro may pick up a few tips.

About the AuthorSidney Showalter is a man of many and varied talents and experiences, none of which includes professional housecleaning. Even so, his family, college, and naval experiences established a keen observation on the needs and approaches necessary to clean a house in a professional manner. He currently lives in Naples, Florida.
